This workshop is suitable for: Staff new to working in general practice and staff working in general practice who want a fundamental refresh, or assurance that what they do is the best they can do.

Introduction

This course sets out to provide assurance to practice staff on how to handle data and information safely and securely. Given the scale of data used in a general practice, it covers a wide set of topics, from a fundamental perspective. By the end of the session staff should have a good grasp of the importance of confidentiality & data protection in the practice setting and be equipped with the key knowledge and skills not to make any basic mistakes.

The Fundamentals of Confidentiality:

- What can go wrong in a practice and the benefits of getting it right
- Communicating via email, phone, fax, answerphone, text and letter
- Informing patients about uses of data and handling queries
- Sharing data appropriately and effectively
- Technology – threats to security and benefits of use
- Assessing and ensuring security in processes
- Dealing with data breaches, minimising impact
